"Dear me! Was I doing that?" grunted Mrs. Twistytail. "Well, it's no wonder! I'm so kerflummoxed!"

"I'll come in and speak to the piggie boys." said Uncle Wingrily, and when he saw what a nice lot of toys Curly and Floppy had to play with. even if they did have to stay in the house, the bunny rabbit said:

"Why, I'm sahamed of you boys! You ought to be happy, and not furs and make your mother all flustered. Why, here's Curly's tin fife. You can hlow such jolly tunes on it as never was!"

I know lots of little animal children that haven't any toys at all," said Uncle Wiggily.

Oh, do you?" asked Curly, "Then please take one of them my tin fife. I'll feel better than ever if I give away something like that."

bungalow, wondering on the way to shen; whom he could give the tin fife and soldiers.

And, all of a sudden, as Uncle Wiggilly was hopping alone through the woods, ou! popped the bad old Fipsisewah, worse than ever.

"Souse! Souse! I must have pickled souse off your ears!" cried the Pipsisewah to Uncle Wiggily.

"Oh, please don't bite souse off my ears!" begged the rabbit gentleman.

"Yee, I shall!" howled the Pip, as I call him for short.

"Will you let me go, and not bite souse off my ears if I play you a tune on a tin fife?" asked Uncle Wiggily, as he thought of the one in his pocket.

"I don't know. Play a tune and I'll see." said the Pipsisewah, considering like.

So Uncle Wiggily took out the fife and he played as nice a tune as he knew how.

"Nope!" cried the Pipsisewah. "Ill not let you go for that! Souse I need and souse I will have. I'm going to hite it off your ears tooting tin fife or not. Here I come for nouse!"

"Oh, you do, ch? Well, we'll see about that!" cried a new voice. "Hait! company form! "Tenshion! Fix bayonets! Aim guns! Shoot the Pipsisewah!" and out of Uncle Wiggily's pocket jumped Floppy's tin soldiers. They had suddenly sprung into life by the blowing of the tin fife, and they formed in line on the snow, as they leaped from the bunny's pocket, and simed their guns straight at the Pipsisewah just like real soldiers.

"Oh, I'll be good! I'll be good!" cried the Pip "I won't take any souse from Uncle Wiggily! Don't shoot me!" And away he ran as fast as he could go. He was afraid of the IIn soldiers. "Ha!" Ha!" laughed their captain. "Forward, march! Into Uncle Wiggily's pocket!" Then they all jumped back arain, and snuggled dewn, and the bunny took them, and the tin fife, to a poor little squirrel boy who liked them very much. So this teaches us that soldiers are very good, and if the rice

Loew's news weekly and a comedy reel are added.

Lucille Cavanagh, who heads the bill it the Orpheum this week, has in her new dance revue of 1919 a vaudeville offering which is said to surpass any of her previous acts. The Indian song and dance, with its appropriate scenic effects and costuming is a feature and the parasol dance at the acts end is another. The music and tyrics of the dance are from the pen of Dave Stamper.

Neil O'Brien Minstrels.

When the Neil O'Brien ministrels play their engagement at the New Lyric theater Monday matines and night it will be found that they will be more firmly intrenched than ever in the admiration of local theatergoers. The association of this premier ministrel comedian with his manager, Oscar F. Hodge, has been a particularly fortunate one and the organization is now on its seventh tour of the country. Each year an effort is made to improve on the season before, and the Neil O'Brien ministrels are now recognized as the foremost in this particular style of entertainment. Mr. O'Brien is not only a successful and popular burnt-cork comedian, but is also a capable producer and stage director, and the entire program is given under his supervision and bears the mark of his wit and good taste. And yet he had much poise as compared to the others she had known. It was this—this avoidance of her touch that had made her doubt her power over him before; put her in such a rage. But when he had left his business trip to At once her doubts all left her. She was series. Freddle still might struggle against her, she knew, but—he was hooked. His return to Mapleville proved that Indeed she had not dared to dream of such a tribute. She knew that now she had only to give him enough rope and he would hang himself.

Not that Estrelda had even now thought of marriage; of Freddle Mason as a possible husband. Marriages were not thus casually made in Mapleville. There, the young men "kept company with the girl of their choice for a year or more before they plucked up courage enough to propose. Even after this formality there always was much financing to be arranged. There was the "nest egg" to be saved and except in rare instances it had to be decided whether the young couple should live with "his folks" or hers, until they "got on their feet." No—it is but fair to record that Estreida did not plan to marry Freddle. He was to be her beau; her "catch"—that was all. But because she knew him to be the coveted of every girl in town she was more than anxious to make her holdings secure. She knew of but one way to do this. productive of sentimental results. It was a path of gold and green and it was shady. Moreover those who walked its way could not be seen from Mapleville. Estreida led Freddie to it.

Three Memphlans are named in Monday's casualty list as having felt the sting of Huns' bullets. One of them paid the supreme sacrifice and two others were wounded in action.

Private John W. Barr. United States marines, laid down his life on the Soissons battlefield on July 19, 1918. It is announced at last by the government. For six months his anxious parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Barr. now of Lexington, Ky. did not hear from him and investigated, with the result of the announcement of his death in action.

He enlisted at Memphis on March 7, 1918. He formerly resided at 1291 Harbert avenue. He was killed, according to the information reaching Memphis, as he swept with his company across a affeld in the face of point-blank machine gun and artillery fire.

Sergt. Grady S. Siler, of the 119th ambulance company, 105th sanitary train, 30th division, was heavily gassed on Sept. 30, when the Tennessee troops broke the Hindenburg line near Cambrai. The soldier has written to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Siler, 381 North Bellevue boulevard, describing his work as commander of a platoon of stretcher bearers. Lately he has written to his able to rejoin his company.

Private Joseph S. Nance, 622 Greenlaw street, was slightly wounded in the recent fighting, according to the casualty list.

Fair fortunes attend this day, according to astrology. Jupiter, Venus and Mars are all in benefic aspect.

Above all this should be an auspicious wedding day and if a soldier be the bridegroom long life and success seem assured, the seers declare.

On this date theaters should profit and the players should tenefit.

It is a sway under which all assemblies that bring men and women together for friendly association should be very successful.

The stars indicate foreign visitors and much entertainment in private homes as well as in public places.

There is a sign read as presaging much organizing and correspondence between this country and the allies for purposes of social and industrial cooperation.

Many foreign children will be adopted by Americans, it is again predicted.

Legislation beneficial to soldiers is foreshadowed and many fighters who return will gain high place in business affairs quickly, it is prophested, for they will reveal a great mental development and seriousness of purpose. This is in accord with prophesies made at the beginning of the war.

Increase of the birth rate will be marked this month and girls will probably predominate.

Leaders in societies or legislative bedies come under a direction of the stars making for sudden changes. This may apply to congress as well as to state bodies.

Teachers who will appear in the early spring, astrologers foretell. Some of these may be from oriental countries.

Germany is still under the finfuence of the evil planets that encouraged the war, astrologers declare, and it will be a long time before the country is released from the sinister power of the malefe tears.

Stabbed five times in the back carly Sunday night. W. A. Campbell, 24. a soda dispenser at Dinstuhl's on North Main street, lies in a precarious coadition at St. Joseph's hospital, where he was taken immediately after the affray, which occurred in the front part of the store. Warren Chandler, 17, also a soda dispenser, who inflicted the wounds, was arrested a few hours later by Detective Heckle and Patrolman York and is being held on a charge of assault to commit murder.

According to the police, Campbell was at work in the store at 7.45 o clock Sunday evening when Chandler, accompanied by two boy friends, went in and called Campbell to the front door. While one of Chandler's friends held Campbell, Chandler drew a knife and began jabbing Campbell in the back. One of the blows struck the spine.

Monday Campbell's condition took a semiconacious condition.

Chandler's version of the trouble varies widely from the first report. He claims that the altereation grew out of a craps game staged Saturday night at Campbell's home on Adams avenue, in which Campbell when on Adams avenue, in which Campbell was a heavy loser. In an effort to soothe Campbell's feelings, Chandler says he went to see Campbell for the money.
